

Rustic Canyon Adds Draught Beer to Arsenal

Posted August 28, 2009

This news came a day too late to include in L.A. Beer Blast #31, but Rustic Canyon Wine Bar and Seasonal Kitchen just added three taps. According to Rustic Canyon co-owner Josh Loeb, “We are going to be rotating our three taps on a regular basis. I will almost always tweet the new beers when they are on, so if you guys are signed up you’ll see what is coming out. We generally have 3 different styles. Right now it’s Craftsman’s 1903 Lager, Allagash White, and a really great Belgian Beer called Witkap Pater Dubbel. I know that Craftsman and possibly the Witkap do not come in bottles. We will generally try to have really cool domestic artisan brews and really awesome rare stuff like the Witkap.”

This news came a day too late to include in L.A. Beer Blast #31, but Rustic Canyon Wine Bar and Seasonal Kitchen just added three taps. According to Rustic Canyon co-owner Josh Loeb, “We are going to be rotating our three taps on a regular basis. I will almost always tweet the new beers when they are on, so if you guys are signed up you’ll see what is coming out. We generally have 3 different styles. Right now it’s Craftsman’s 1903 Lager, Allagash White, and a really great Belgian Beer called Witkap Pater Dubbel. I know that Craftsman and possibly the Witkap do not come in bottles. We will generally try to have really cool domestic artisan brews and really awesome rare stuff like the Witkap.”

<http://www.foodgps.com/rustic-canyon-adds-draught-beer-to-arsenal/>